Supreme Court justices blast Bush administration for its failure to comply with court order WASHINGTON (CN) - The Supreme Court on Friday refused to grant the appeals of state attorneys general in the same-sex marriage case, based on their response to the order requiring them to turn over records to the LGBT couples challenging the Defense of Marriage Act. After the federal government failed to respond to a New York federal court order, the justices refused to make the records public or intervene. "After 17 days of telephone and e-mail exchanges between the parties, we are still waiting for more than 1,500 pages of documents from this Justice Department," the Supreme Court majority said in the 9-0 ruling Friday. Justice Antonin Scalia wrote an 8-page concurring opinion, in which he took specific issue with Solicitor General Donald Verrilli's failure to comply with the court's order. "I respectfully dissent because, as the government appears to acknowledge, its refusal to comply with the orders of this court has been unreasonable and is not entitled to deference," Scalia wrote. "The government's refusal to comply with the orders of this court can no longer be characterized as 'unilateral action' by the 'Attorney General of the United States'; that is now the position of the 'Attorney General of the United States and the Solicitor General.'" Scalia explained that the federal government, under its attorneys, represented the administration when the court sought information. The attorney general, he wrote, doesn't have the discretion to commit the government to a position it has not yet taken, which he characterized as a clear conflict of interest in Verrilli's case. Scalia noted that President Barack Obama, who signed the Defense of Marriage Act in 1996, has stated that it is unconstitutional to extend marriage rights to same-sex couples. "Because I cannot conceive of how a president, in deciding whether to defend a federal law, may take account of a contrary view expressed by the president who enacted it, I believe that the government c9d1549cdd

Monster Gems 2: Monster Gems is a puzzle game with 8 levels, each with many types of stones. To be more precise, we are talking about all kinds of small unique stones. Monster Gems has a very special drawing mechanism in combination with a puzzle game. This way you will be able to solve the puzzle in just a few minutes. Read More » Shipwrecked is a game in which you are stranded on a deserted island. Do not worry, we're with you. On this island, there are many things that can help you. Among other things, there are 50 coins scattered around. You have to find them all and use them to call a helicopter. But beware, there are many bad things on this island as well. There are also many pirates on the island who are looking for you and who want to board your ship. The helicopter which flies overhead is not the best solution, because the pirates will be able to see it easily. However, there is one thing that you can count on: your ship has a lot of things on it that are very useful for survival. You can use the gear to protect yourself from the bad weather. For example, there are gloves, jackets, headbands and boots for protection against wind and rain. You can also use raincoats to protect your clothes from the rain and you can protect your clothes with tents if it gets hot in the sun. Also, there is something else on your ship that will make sure that you will be able to survive: a radio. You can play pirate radio and listen to many interesting radio stations. You can also use your radio to call the helicopter and to warn other people who are stranded on the island. However, you can only call the helicopter if it passes over you. And you can only do this if you have a lot of coins on the island. If you have only 50 coins on the island, you can forget about calling the helicopter. At the end of the game, you can make a huge amount of money by trading the things you found on the island with other players. Of course, the price you can pay is your coins. The game is very exciting, because it has many challenges and exciting situations. However, the game can be a little difficult, because it is very easy to get lost. You can also

What's new:

Ever since the Ottoman Empire captured Constantinople in 1453, then ruled until the rise of the young and powerful nationalism seen in the onset of the Great War in 1914, it had shared western Europe's view of the traditional Christmas. For the Ottomans, their respect for the religious and festive strictures of Christmas was a badge of their enlightened, modern view of social order. As the change from the drab cheerless Turkish winter to the bright and airy seat of the Ottoman Empire, and with Ottoman military might throughout the world, Christmas always accompanied peace and good will among the Ottomans and the nations they'd conquered and conquered anew—west, north and south. If you were a western European Christian, you had to celebrate the Christmas as the Turks did. That was then. It's now, beginning with the 2017 holiday season, that turks are back. As reports of the liberalization of Turkey's religious tenets in the aftermath of the death of Turkey's founder, Mustafa Kemal Atatürk, begin to settle, Turkish Prime Minister Recep Erdoğan has made it clear that the empire of old is back. Erdoğan remarked to the Khaleej Times in an interview that calls for equality between the secular state and the Islamic faith. "From now on it is possible to say that two countries have been united to the extent that they are different," Erdoğan, a Muslim clergyman and a former chairman of the ruling AK Party has said in recent days. "Unless you can gain such changes, if such has taken place at different levels for the sake of democracy you will always struggle and struggle for this." RELATED STORIES When asked whether the country had entered an era of Muslims and Christians together living in harmony, Erdoğan stated: "Unless you can gain such changes, if such has taken place at different levels for the sake of democracy you will always struggle and struggle for this." Erdoğan, responding to the question as he prepared to face votes for a third term in office, also said that Turkey's "tradition of [being] modern, a moderate Muslim state" does not mean a deviation from the truth. "That fact means we come together [with the others]. This togetherness is possible by thinking in this direction," Erdoğan added. "In our perception, it is possible to see
